In this fifth program of our multi-season survey of the complete works of Johannes Ockeghem, we present one of his earliest surviving works, the Missa Caput. Those who have attended previous concerts in the series will perhaps share the impression we are forming of Ockeghem’s compositional character—curious, experimental, boldly asserting his superior craft vis-à-vis his models by surpassing their technical achievements, and stretching the theoretical systems of his time in ways that challenge our ability to find a definite solution (and surely posed similar challenges to musicians of his day). No two of his pieces sound quite the same or address formal problems in the same manner. As Fabrice Fitch observes in his study of the Masses, "most of them present a highly distinctive profile, determined by features peculiar to the one work alone. Thus, the soundscapes of individual works vary considerably, and the differences between them are often more obvious than their similarities."

These tendencies are already obvious in the music of Ockeghem’s younger years, including the Missa Caput. Probably composed by around 1450, the Mass borrows its cantus firmus (the preexisting plainchant melody quoted by the tenor) and much of its structure from an anonymous English Mass that arrived on the continent perhaps a decade before. The technical innovations of the English work, in particular the way in which it handles the two lower lines of its four-voice contrapuntal texture (labelled Tenor primus and secundus), influenced a generation of French and Flemish composers. Ockeghem adopts the new manner of writing in four parts, but then ups the technical ante considerably by the daring and novel use to which he puts the cantus firmus.

The cantus firmus melody quotes a long melisma on the word “caput” from an antiphon sung during the foot-washing ceremony on Maundy Thursday in the Sarum rite. The Sarum antiphon is in the seventh mode, with a G final and no flat in its signature; the Caput melisma begins on a B-natural, ends on G, and features many prominent Bs and Es. The English Caput Mass places the plainchant melody in its traditional locus in the second-lowest voice, and unsurprisingly, the Mass, like its tenor, is in a sparkling G mode, featuring numerous G and C major triads. This is the normal situation in modal polyphony: according to the preeminent theorist Johannes Tinctoris, the mode of a piece generally corresponds to the mode of its tenor.

If anyone were to say to me, Tinctoris, I ask you, of what mode is the song Le serviteur? I would reply, In general, of an irregular first mode, because the tenor, the principal part of the song, is of such a mode.

Liber de natura et proprietate tonorum, 1476
The Gloria of the English Mass, performed on this program, conveys an excellent sense of the whole work—sunny, jazzy, energetic, seemingly uncomplicated, with the top two parts granted the lion's share of melodic and rhythmic interest, the bottom two proceeding mostly in longer note values and together creating the harmonic framework.

Arrestingly strange in sound from its very opening measures, Ockeghem's Missa Caput could hardly be more different in effect. Its young composer (probably less than 30 when he wrote the piece) takes the cantus firmus of the English Mass—not the plainchant itself, which he likely did not know, as it belongs to the insular Sarum repertoire—intact, including the rhythms devised by the English composer, but he directs that it be sung down an octave, where it becomes the lowest voice in the counterpoint. (See figures 1-3.) In this position its numerous B-naturals require F-sharps a perfect fifth above them in order to create a “perfect consonance” or stable harmony. This situation is unusual enough in fifteenth-century music, where sharps lie outside the gamut of “real music,” must be borrowed from the “imaginary” world of musica ficta (feigned or false music), and usually function as temporarily raised leading tones at cadences—F-sharp leading to G, for example. The greater oddity is that Ockeghem’s Mass is not oriented to a final of G, as is the English Missa Caput, but to D, with F-naturals on this program, conveys an excellent sense of the opening measures, Missa Caput opens with an F-sharp above it, which is in turn quickly succeeded by another D sonority, this time with an F natural in the topmost voice. Soon more F-sharps ensue, and it’s not long before a B-flat turns up, too. The Mass is rife with such harmonic contradictions from start to finish.

So things sound strange indeed—but we can’t be certain exactly how strange. The problem is that fifteenth-century musicians did not invariably specify in their written music how to inflect the notes of the scale, raising or lowering them a semitone by adding a flat or sharp, but left many such inflections implicit. The application of such chromatic alterations was governed by a combination of theory, melodic convention, and custom. Singers were expected to solve these questions on the spot, and they didn’t always agree how to resolve issues when observing one rule or custom creates a conflict with another. (An early sixteenth-century correspondence documents one such disagreement between musicians.) Such questions arise again and again in Ockeghem’s Missa Caput, and many commentators have expressed their perplexity over it, one writing that “the application of these alterations, which were taken for granted, presents difficulties without number,” another describing the harmonic style of the Mass as “erratic and arbitrary.”

Absence of personal guidance from Ockeghem himself, it does not seem possible to arrive at a definitive solution to the puzzles posed by the piece and so, as Jaap van Benthem remarks in the preface to his edition of the Missa Caput, “We can be quite sure that any performance of the composition not supervised by the composer or someone acquainted with the composer’s intentions must, even at the time, have been different from all others.”

We make no claims to have discovered what Ockeghem would have wished (and our reading of the piece differs from van Benthem’s, naturally), but we have attempted to conjure up a performance that a group of well-trained fifteenth-century singers might have produced from the surviving source material—two manuscript copies, neither of which, it must be noted, derives directly from Ockeghem. (One was copied in northern Italy in the late 1450s, the other in the Habsburg-Burgundian scriptorium in Mechelen nearly a half century later, a few years after the composer’s death.)

However the Missa Caput is realised in performance, it makes for compelling listening—mysterious, certainly, but hauntingly beautiful, sonorous, meditative, and fascinating, the extraordinary creation of a phenomenally gifted, skilled, and imaginative composer at the beginning of his career.

The English Caput Mass is but one of a large number of works by English musicians that crossed the Channel in the first half of the fifteenth century. According to contemporary witnesses, the style practiced by John Dunstaple and other insular composers had a profound effect on continental musicians.

The English manner arrived on the continent in the early decades of the 1400s and was assimilated by Guillaume Du Fay and Gilles de Bins, called Binchois, who transmitted it to their followers, thus drawing the curtain on the Middle Ages and ushering in the musical Renaissance. As David Fallows pointed out thirty years ago, however, “such a view fails to match the discernible facts.” All of the features typically associated with the “new” style can be found in works by continental composers of the generation before Dunstaple, and it is far from clear exactly how and when English music and musicians exerted an influence across the Channel, although they undeniably did so in some fashion, for English music of the fifteenth century is abundant in manuscripts from northern Italy and Germany. (In contrast, most English sources have been destroyed.)

At this time...the possibilities of our music have been so marvelously increased that there appears to be a new art, if I may so call it, whose fount and origin is held to be among the English, of whom Dunstaple stood forth as chief. Contemporary with him in France were Du Fay and Binchoys, to whom directly succeeded the moderns Ockeghem, Busnoys, Regis and Caron, who are the most excellent of all the composers I ever heard.

Johannes Tinctoris, Proportionale musices, 1472-3 (trans. Oliver Strunk)

Much of our commonplace understanding of the evolution of European music in the early fifteenth century rests upon the few lines cited above. From them has been derived a satisfyingly linear narrative starring a triumvirate of great composers. According to this account, Dunstaple and his English contemporaries developed a new compositional style which was sweet and pleasing to the ear, rich in harmonic concords, and supple in melody. The contenance angloise or English manner arrived on the continent and its followers, thus drawing the curtain on the Middle Ages and ushering in the musical Renaissance. As David Fallows pointed out thirty years ago, however, “such a view fails to match the discernible facts.” All of the features typically associated with the “new” style can be found in works by continental composers of the generation before Dunstaple, and it is far from clear exactly how and when English music and musicians exerted an influence across the Channel, although they undeniably did so in some fashion, for English music of the fifteenth century is abundant in manuscripts from northern Italy and Germany. (In contrast, most English sources have been destroyed.)

Furthermore, as Fallows went on to observe, the statements made by Le Franc and Tinctoris are considerably less specific and more difficult to interpret than latter-day music historians have often taken them to be. In the passage above from Le champion des dames, the hero, Franc Vouloir (an allegorical character, Free Will), is explaining to his opponent how the hitherto unattained perfection of the arts in the modern age demonstrates that the end of the world is at hand. He describes how the singing of Du Fay and Binchois surpasses that of three famous musicians of the previous generation; adds more detail about their new practices “en haulle et basse musique” (an expression that would usually refer to instrumental ensembles); and finally says that they have partaken of an unexplained English manner. By these means their “chant” (performance or composition?) is made joyous and worthy. But note that the “contenance angloise” does not necessarily include the technical features listed beforehand, which themselves resist our precise understanding.

As for Tinctoris, a Franco-Flemish theorist writing in Naples, he is careful to say that the fount and origin of the new art is held to be among the English (Fallows speculates that Tinctoris’s source, like Le Franc’s, may have been Du Fay himself, who probably knew both men) and that the French composers were contemporary with Dunstaple, not necessarily disciples of his or his music.

In short, the history of English influence on continental music is more complicated than the tidy canonical story suggests, which is not surprising. As we have seen, Ockeghem's handling of his English model—an undeniable case of inspiration and modelling—shows how a composer of genius could transform his source materials so that they are virtually unrecognisable to the ear.

In order to place Ockeghem's Mass in the context of the contenance angloise, our program offers a small sample of English music from across these years, including sacred music in Latin, a song in English, and two French songs by English composers. The earliest piece is by one John Pyamour, who became a clerk in Henry V’s Chapel Royal in the late 1410s and was commissioned to impress boy choristers and take them to the King in France. Preserved only in continental sources, Quam pulcra es is Pyamour’s only known work. The text, from the Song of Songs, was also famously set by Dunstable.

Next we turn to the music of Walter Frye. Presumably a near-contemporary of Ockeghem, Frye himself remains obscure and undocumented, but his works were extremely popular in continental Europe. The antiphon setting Ave regina celorum turns up in more than a dozen manuscripts, including a couple of songbooks devoted primarily to secular music in which it is the first item, and the song Tout a par moy survives in ten sources, in one of which it is ascribed (unconvincingly) to Binchois. Our last two songs come from the Burgundian court. The first, Le souvenir de vous me tue, is by Robert Morton, described in a document of late 1457 appointing him to the chapel of Philip the Good as “chappellain angloix”; absent the appellation, one would have assumed Morton was French. Le souvenir, one of his most famous songs, is poignant and ravishingly lovely. Finally, before turning back to the Sanctus and Agnus dei of Ockeghem’s Caput Mass, we will hear a song by the most celebrated of all Burgundian court composers, Gilles de Bins, called Binchois, like Ockeghem a native of the county of Hainaut in present-day Belgium, whose elegant style and perfectly balanced melodies established a standard to which all song composers of the fifteenth century might aspire. Whereas Le souvenir features a text in a female voice (revealed by adjectival endings), Dueil angoisseux sets a ballade by Christine de Pizan. Binchois meets the eloquence of Christine’s lament, perhaps written on the death of her husband, with music of simple, restrained, pathos.

Tout a par moy, affin qu'on ne me voye,
Si tresdolant que plus je ne pourroye,
Je me tiens seul comme une ame esbahie,
Faisant regrez de ma dolente vie
Et de Fortune, qui so fiercement me guerroye.
Pensez quel deul mon desplaisir m'envoye,
Car j'ay des maulx a si tresgrant monjoye
Que je crains fort que briefment je m'occye.
Tout a par moy, affin qu'on ne me voye,
Si tresdolant que plus je ne pourroye,
Je me tiens seul comme une ame esbasye.
Et non pourtant se mourir en devoye
En la poursuitte de vous servir, ma joye,
Et fussiez vous plus fort mon ennemye,
N'ayez paour qu'a jamaiz vous oblie,
Car c'est mon sort qu'il faudra que vostre soye.
Tout a par moy, affin qu'on ne me voye…

Le souvenir de vous me tue,
Mon seul bien, quant je ne vous voy,
Car je vous jure sur ma foy,
Sans vous ma liesse est perdue.

Quant vous estes hor de ma vue,
Je me plains et dis a par moy:
Le souvenir de vous me tue,
Mon seul bien, quant je ne vous voy.

Seule demeure despourveue,
D'ame nul confort ne reçoy,
Et si seuffre sans faire effroy,
Jusques a vostre revenue.

Le souvenir de vous me tue…

All by myself, so that no-one sees me,
so very hurt that I could not be more so,
I keep myself apart, like a stunned soul,
lamenting my doleful life
and Fortune, who so fiercely wars against me.

Think what grief my misfortune sends me, for I have woes in such great amount that I very much fear that soon I shall kill myself.

By myself, so that no-one sees me,
so very hurt that I could not be more so,
I keep myself apart, like a stunned soul.

Yet nonetheless, should I have to die while engaged in your service, my joy, and were you to become even more my enemy,
I have no fear that I could ever forget you,
for it is my fate to be yours.

All by myself, so that no-one sees me…

The memory of you kills me,
my only love, when I do not see you,
For I swear to you upon my faith,
Without you my joy is lost.

When you are out of my sight,
I lament and say to myself:
The memory of you kills me,
my only love, when I do not see you.

Alone, I remain deprived,
From no soul do I receive comfort,
And thus I suffer without complaint
Until your return.

The memory of you kills me…

Duell angoisseux, rage demeseurée,
Grief desespoir plain de forcement,
Langor sans fin et vie maleurée,
Plaine de plour, d’angoisse et de torment,
Coeur doloureux qui vit obscurement,
Tenebreux corps sur le point de partir
Aye sans cesser, continuellement,
Et si ne puis ne garir ne morir.
Fierté, durté de joye separée,
Triste penser, parfondi gemissement,
Engoisse grant en las cuer enserrée,
Courroux amer porté couvertement,
Mornie maintien sans resjoissement,
Espoir dolent qui tous biens fait tarir,
Si sont en moy, sanz partir nullement,
Et si ne puis ne garir ne morir.

Sousi, anuy qui tous jours a durée,
Aspre veillir, tressaillir en dormont,
Labour en vain a chiere alangourée
En grief travail infortunément,
Et tout le mal qu’on puët entièrement
Dire et penser sanz espoir de garir,
Me tormentent desmesurément,
Et si ne puis ne garir ne morir.

Princes, priez a Dieu que bien briefment
Me doint la mort, s’autrement secourir
Ne veult le mal ou languis durement,
Et si ne puis ne garir ne morir.

— Christine de Pizan (1365-after July 1429)

Anguished sorrow, unbounded rage, grieved despair, full of madness,
endless languor and a life of misfortune,
full of tears, anguish, and torment,
doleful heart which lives in darkness,
wraithlike body on the verge of death:
all these are mine without cease, continually,
and thus I can neither heal nor die.

Harshness, hardness bereft of joy,
sad thoughts, deep sighs,
great anguish locked in a weary heart,
bitter distress endured in secret,
mournful demeanour without gladness,
foreboding which dries up all good,
are in me and never depart,
and thus I can neither heal nor die.

Worry, affliction which lasts forever,
bitter waking, troubled sleep,
vain labor with a listless expression,
destined to grievous torment,
and all the ill which one could ever say or think, without hope of relief, torque me beyond measure,
and thus I can neither heal nor die.

Prince, pray to God that very soon he grant me death, if by other means he will not remedy the ill in which I painfully languish, so that I can neither heal nor die.
Sanctus, sanctus, sanctus,

miserere nobis.
Agnus dei, qui tollis peccata mundi,
miserere nobis.
Agnus dei, qui tollis peccata mundi,
dona nobis pacem.

Holy, Holy, Holy,
Lord God of hosts.
Heaven and earth are full of your glory
Hosanna in the highest.
Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.
Hosanna in the highest.

Agnus dei

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

Blue Heron has been acclaimed by The Boston Globe as “one of the Boston music community’s indispensables” and hailed by Alex Ross in The New Yorker for its “expressive intensity.” Committed to vivid live performance informed and enhanced by the study of original source materials and historical performance practices, Blue Heron ranges over a wide repertoire, from plainchant to new music, with particular specialities in 15th-century Franco-Flemish and early 16th-century English polyphony. Blue Heron’s first CD, featuring music by Guillaume Du Fay, was released in 2007. In 2010 the ensemble inaugurated a 5-CD series of Music from the Peterhouse Partbooks, including many world premiere recordings of works copied c. 1540 for Canterbury Cathedral; the fifth disc will be released in March of this year. Blue Heron’s recordings also include a CD of plainchant and polyphony to accompany Thomas Forrest Kelly’s book Capturing Music: The Story of Notation and the live recording Christmas in Medieval England. Jessie Ann Owens (UC Davis) and Blue Heron won the 2015 Noah Greenberg Award from the American Musicological Society to support a world premiere recording of Cipriano de Rore’s first book of madrigals (1542), to be begun next season.

Founded in 1999, Blue Heron presents a concert series in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and has appeared at the Boston Early Music Festival; in New York City at Music Before 1800, The Cloisters (Metropolitan Museum of Art), and the 92nd Street Y; at the Library of Congress and Dumbarton Oaks in Washington, D.C.; at the Berkeley Early Music Festival; and in San Luis Obispo, Seattle, St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia. This season’s highlights include a debut at the National Gallery of Art in a special program designed to accompany the exhibition “Della Robbia: Sculpting with Color in Renaissance Florence.” Blue Heron has been in residence at the Center for Early Music Studies at Boston University and at Boston College. In 2015 the ensemble embarked on a long-term project to perform the complete works of Johannes Ockeghem (c. 1420-1497). Entitled Ockeghem@600, it will wind up in 2020-21, in time to commemorate the composer’s circa-600th birthday.

Bass-baritone Paul Guttry has performed throughout the USA and internationally with Sequentia, Chanticleer, the Boston Camerata, and New York’s Ensemble for Early Music. A founding member of Blue Heron, he has also appeared in and around Boston as soloist with Emmanuel Music, the Handel & Haydn Society, the Boston Early Music Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, Cantata Singers, Boston Cecilia, Prism Opera, Boston Revels, Collage, the Boston Modern Orchestra Project, and Intermezzo. Paul can be heard on all Blue Heron’s recordings, on discs of medieval music by Sequentia, Kurt Weill’s Johnny Johnson and French airs de cour with the Boston Camerata, and on Emmanuel Music’s Bach CDs.
Acclaimed as a “lovely, tender high tenor” by The New York Times, Owen McIntosh enjoys a diverse career of chamber music and solo performance ranging from bluegrass to reggae, heavy metal to art song, and opera to oratorio. A native of remote Northern California, Mr. McIntosh has shared the stage with the country’s finest ensembles, including Apollo’s Fire, Blue Heron, Boston Baroque, Carmel Bach Festival, Les Canards Chantants, New Vintage Baroque, Staunton Music Festival, TENET, Trident Ensemble, True Concord, San Diego Bach Collegium, and the Grammy-nominated Choir of Trinity Wall Street. Recent solo engagements include Mozart’s Die Zauberflöte with Boston Baroque, Haydn’s L’isola disabitata with the American Classical Orchestra, Monteverdi’s Vespers of 1610 with Apollo’s Fire and with Green Mountain Project and Grand Rapids Symphony, Bach’s St. Matthew Passion with Grand Rapids Symphony, Il ritorno d’Ulisse in patria with Opera Omnia and Boston Baroque, and the Evangelist in Bach’s St. John Passion with Tucson Chamber Artists.

Described by critics as “a gifted young tenor with wonderful comedic talents,” an “alluring tenor voice,” and a “bright, clear and fully-fledged tenor sonority,” Jason McStoots has performed around the world. In 2015 he was honored with a Grammy award with the Boston Early Music Festival for his roles of Ixion in La descente d’Orphée aux enfers and Forestan in La couronne de fleurs, both by Charpentier. Recent appearances include Tabarco in Handel’s Almira, Apollo in Monteverdi’s Orfeo, and Eumete and Giove in Il ritorno d’Ulisse in patria, all with the Boston Early Music Festival, Pedrillo in Mozart’s Abduction from the Seraglio and Evangelist in Bach’s St. Mark Passion with Emmanuel Music, and soloist for Monteverdi’s Vespers of 1610 with the Green Mountain Project. He has also performed with Boston Lyric Opera, Pacific MusicWorks, Boston Camerata, TENET, San Juan Symphony, Pablo Casals Festival, Early Music Guild of Seattle, Tragedimica, and the Tanglewood Music Center. Mr. McStoots can be heard on all six of Blue Heron’s recordings, and also appears on the Grammy-nominated recording of Lully’s Pysché and on other discs of music of Charpentier and John Blow with the Boston Early Music Festival on the CPO label. He is a voice teacher at Brandeis University and a stage director, staging operatic works with Connecticut Early Music Festival, Amherst Early Music Festival, Wayland First Unitarian Players, and Brandeis University.

Hailed for his “voice of seductive beauty,” baritone David McFerrin has won critical acclaim in a variety of repertoire. His opera credits include Santa Fe Opera, Seattle Opera, Florida Grand Opera, the Rossini Festival in Germany, and numerous roles with Boston Lyric Opera. As a concert soloist he has sung with the Cleveland Orchestra, Israel Philharmonic, and Boston Pops, and in recital at the Caramoor, Ravinia, and Marlboro Festivals. Last season Mr. McFerrin was an Adams Fellow at the Carmel Bach Festival in California, debuted with the Vermont Symphony and Boston’s chamber orchestra A Far Cry, and appeared with the Handel & Haydn Society in Boston, Canada, and California. He was also runner-up in the Oratorio Society of New York’s 2016 Lyndon Woodside Solo Competition. Upcoming highlights include solo appearances with the Handel & Haydn Society in performances of Bach and Monteverdi, a debut with Boston Baroque as Achilla in Handel’s Giulio Cesare, and various programs with Blue Heron.

Recent appearances include Tabarco in Handel’s Almira, Apollo in Monteverdi’s Orfeo, and Eumete and Giove in Il ritorno d’Ulisse in patria, all with the Boston Early Music Festival, Pedrillo in Mozart’s Abduction from the Seraglio and Evangelist in Bach’s St. Mark Passion with Emmanuel Music, and soloist for Monteverdi’s Vespers of 1610 with the Green Mountain Project. He has also performed with Boston Lyric Opera, Pacific MusicWorks, Boston Camerata, TENET, San Juan Symphony, Pablo Casals Festival, Early Music Guild of Seattle, Tragedimica, and the Tanglewood Music Center. Mr. McStoots can be heard on all six of Blue Heron’s recordings, and also appears on the Grammy-nominated recording of Lully’s Pysché and on other discs of music of Charpentier and John Blow with the Boston Early Music Festival on the CPO label. He is a voice teacher at Brandeis University and a stage director, staging operatic works with Connecticut Early Music Festival, Amherst Early Music Festival, Wayland First Unitarian Players, and Brandeis University.

Scott Metcalfe has gained wide recognition as one of North America’s leading specialists in music from the fifteenth through seventeenth centuries and beyond. Musical and artistic director of Blue Heron, he is also music director of New York City’s Green Mountain Project (Jolie Greenleaf, artistic director) and has been guest director of TENET (New York), the Handel & Haydn Society (Boston), Emmanuel Music (Boston), the Tudor Choir and Seattle Baroque, Pacific Baroque Orchestra (Vancouver, BC), Quire Cleveland, the Dryden Ensemble (Princeton, NJ), and Early Music America’s Young Performers Festival Ensemble. Metcalfe also enjoys a career as a baroque violinist, playing with Les Délices (dir. Debra Nagy), Montreal Baroque (dir. Eric Milnes), and other ensembles, and directing the baroque orchestra at Oberlin Conservatory. He taught vocal ensemble repertoire and performance practice at Boston University from 2006-2015 and is at work on a new edition of the songs of Gilles Binchois.

Countertenor Martin Near enjoys a varied career exploring his twin passions for early music and new music. Mr. Near recently sang in the solo quartet of Arvo Pärt’s Passio with the Boston Modern Orchestra Project, was the countertenor soloist in the premiere performance of Dominick DiOrio’s Stabat mater with Juventas New Music Ensemble, sang the role of Hamor in Handel’s Jephtha with Boston Cecilia, and was noted for his “fine work” in Buxtehude’s Heut triumphieret Gottes Sohn with Boston Baroque. He sings regularly with Emmanuel Music, Boston Baroque, and the Handel & Haydn Society. Mr. Near was Music Director of Exsultemus from 2009 to 2012. Grammy-nominated mezzo-soprano Laura Pudwell has established a superlub reputation through her performances worldwide. Equally at home on the opera, oratorio, or recital stage, Ms. Pudwell sings a vast repertoire ranging from early music to contemporary works, and has received international acclaim for her recordings. She is best known in Boston for her appearances in operas presented by...
Tenor Mark Sprinkle’s singing has been described as “expressive,” “very rewarding,” “outstanding,” “vivid,” and “supremely stylish.” He has collaborated with the Boston Early Music Festival, the Boston Camerata, the Mark Morris Dance Group, Emmanuel Music, Boston Baroque, the Handel & Haydn Society, and many others, performed at festivals in Bergen (Norway), Vancouver, Edinburgh, and Aldeburgh (UK), and worked as a soloist and ensemble singer under Seiji Ozawa, Christopher Hogwood, William Christie, Aldeburgh (UK), and worked as a soloist and ensemble singer under Seiji Ozawa, Christopher Hogwood, William Christie, Roger Norrington, John Nelson, Andrew Parrott, Grant Llewellyn, and Craig Smith. He has appeared as a soloist with Concerto Palatino and has sung the Evangelist in Bach’s St. John’s Passion with the Handel & Haydn Society, the Boulder Bach Festival, the Oriana Singers of Vermont, Seraphim Singers, Boston’s Chorus Pro Musica, and the Andover Choral Society, among others. Mr. Sprinkle was a member of the Cambridge Bach Ensemble and a fellow of the Britten-Pears School and has recorded for Dorian, Koch, Harmonia Mundi, Decca, Arabesque, and Telarc.

Praised for his “elegant style” (The Boston Globe), Sumner Thompson is highly sought after as both baritone and tenor. His appearances on the operatic stage include roles in the Boston Early Music Festival’s productions of Conrady’s Ariadne (2003) and Lully’s Psyché (2007) and several European tours with Contemporary Opera Denmark as Orfeo in Monteverdi’s L’Orfeo. He has performed across North America as a soloist with the Handel & Haydn Society, Concerto Palatino, Tafelmusik, Apollo's Fire, Les Boréades (Montreal), Les Voix Baroques, Pacific Baroque Orchestra, the King’s Noyse, Mercury Baroque, and the symphony orchestras of Charlotte, Memphis, and Phoenix. Recent highlights include Monteverdi’s Vespers of 1610 and a new Vespers of 1640 with the Green Mountain Project, Buxtehude’s Membra Jesu Nostri with Les Voix Baroques and Houston's Mercury Baroque, Mozart’s Requiem at St. Thomas Church in New York City, a tour of Japan with Joshua Rifkin and the Cambridge Concentus, a return to the Carmel Bach Festival, and Britten’s War Requiem with the New England Philharmonic and several guest choruses.

OCKEGHEM@600

Ockeghem@600 is Blue Heron’s multi-year project to perform the complete works of Johannes Ockeghem, one of the very greatest composers of the Western tradition, in thirteen programs over the course of seven seasons. Inaugurated in the spring of 2015, Ockeghem@600 will wind up in 2020-21, just in time to commemorate the 600th anniversary of Ockeghem’s birth in circa 1420.

Besides concerts, the undertaking requires and will include a significant component of research into the many questions of fifteenth-century performance practice which remain unsolved puzzles—questions as basic as pitch level, voice types, and scoring. By the end we expect to have a better understanding of such issues. We will also have created a new complete practical edition of the music of Ockeghem, scrupulously based on the original sources and rigorously tested in practice.

Along the way we will also explore music of Ockeghem’s predecessors (Du Fay, Binchois, et al.), contemporaries (Regis, Busnoys, et al.), and followers (Josquin, Obrecht, Agricola, Isaac, et al.), developing and sharing with our audiences a sense of the entire fifteenth-century repertoire. Succeeding our series of recordings of music from the Peterhouse partbooks, the fifth and final volume of which will be released in spring 2017, a new series of five CDs is being planned, including a 2-CD set of all of Ockeghem’s songs.

Joining Blue Heron as adviser for Ockeghem@600 is Professor Sean Gallagher of the New England Conservatory, one of the world’s leading experts on Ockeghem and the music of the fifteenth century.
WHO WAS JOHANNES OCKEGHEM?

Johannes Ockeghem was born in Saint Ghislain, near the city of Mons in the county of Hainaut (now in Belgium) around 1420. He first enters the historical record in 1443 as a vicaire-chanteur at the church of Our Lady in Antwerp, a modest appointment appropriate to a young professional singer. By 1446 he had become one of seven singers in the chapel of Charles I, duke of Bourbon, and in 1451 he joined the musical establishment of Charles VII, king of France. He served the French royal court as premier chapelain for the rest of his career, mainly residing in Tours in the Loire Valley, where he held the prestigious and well-remunerated post of treasurer at the royal collegiate church of Saint Martin. A friend and colleague of the greatest musicians of the previous generation, Guillaume Du Fay and Gilles Binchois, he was esteemed by his contemporaries and successors as a master beyond compare, enormously skilled as both singer and composer, as well as virtuous, generous, and kind.

Writing in 1477, the theorist Johannes Tinctoris placed him at the head of an exalted company of modern composers:

...at this present time, not to mention innumerable singers of the most beautiful diction, there flourish, whether by the effect of some celestial influence or by the force of assiduous practice, countless composers, among them Johannes Ockeghem, Johannes Regis, Antoine Busnoys, Firminus Caron, and Guillaume Faugues, who glory in having studied this divine art under John Dunstable, Gilles Binchois, and Guillaume Du Fay, recently deceased. Nearly all the works of these men exhale such sweetness that in my opinion they are to be considered most suitable, not only for men and heroes, but even for the immortal gods, Indeed, I never hear them, I never study them, without coming away more refreshed and wiser.

Ockeghem died on February 6, 1497. His passing was mourned by numerous musicians and poets. The most famous lament on his death is Nymphes des bois, by the Burgundian court chronicler and poet Jean Molinet, later set to music by Josquin Desprez—an act of homage that Ockeghem had previously rendered Binchois with Mort, tu as navré de ton dart.

Ockeghem left us about two dozen French songs, just over a dozen Masses, and four motets, a relatively small output for one of the greatest composers of all time. Perhaps no composer other than Bach has equalled Ockeghem in contrapuntal skill, and the two men are also equally astonishingly able to invest their work with meaning at every level, from the smallest surface detail to the deepest, largest-scale, awe-inspiringly complex structure, in music that is at once intensely sensuous and rigorously intellectual, of extraordinary beauty and rhythmic vitality. Ockeghem’s music has the miraculous effect of taking hold of and altering our sense of time, and to do so Ockeghem uses means both melodic and rhythmic (pitch and duration, the basic elements of music). His counterpoint spins out long-limbed, supple, and simply gorgeous melodies whose relationship to one another is not obvious—there are few unanimous cadences and few immediately noticeable points of imitation, although many subtle instances occur, often almost hidden within the texture of the music.

His rhythm, too, is complex and varied, oftentimes obscuring the music’s organization into regular metrical units of two or three. Captivating at first hearing, Ockeghem’s music rewards the closest possible study and repeated listening.

HOW DID OCKEGHEM SPELL HIS NAME?

Jehan de Ockeghem was born around 1420 in the small town of Saint Ghislain, near Mons, in the county of Hainaut and in the diocese of Cambrai. Saint Ghislain lies in modern-day Belgium, about 50 miles southwest of Brussels and less than ten miles from the present border with France.

The county of Hainaut or Hainault was a lordship within the Holy Roman Empire with its capital at Mons (Bergen in Flemish); the name comes from the river Haine. Hainaut comprised what is now the Belgian province of Hainaut and part of the French département of Nord, and included the cities of Charleroi, to the east of Mons, and, to the southwest, Valenciennes and the diocesan seat of Cambrai, both in latter-day France. In 1420 the county was ruled by Jacqueline, daughter of duke Wilhelm II of Bavaria-Staubung, but in 1432 it was ceded to the Duchy of Burgundy under Philip the Good; in 1477, upon the death of Charles the Bold, it passed to the Habsburgs with the rest of the Burgundian Netherlands.

The composer’s given name was Jehan (or Jean), normally given as Johannes in Latin or other non-French contexts. The surname suggests that his family originated in the town of Okegem on the Dendre, less than 35 miles to the north in East Flanders. But during the later Middle Ages, Hainaut was culturally and linguistically French, and Jehan very likely grew up speaking French as his first tongue. By the mid-1440s he was living and working in France, and from about 1450 until his death in 1497 he was a member of the chapel of the the king of France and lived in Tours, in the Loire Valley.

The Flemish family name was a source of endless confusion to speakers of Fench, Italian, German, and other languages, and it may be found spelled in a bewildering variety of ways in contemporary sources: Ockeghem, Okeghem, Okeheghem, Okeghen, Okeghen, Ochenhem, Ockem, Obekhan, Obeghan, Hoeecheghen, Hoquegan, Hoqueguern, Hoiueguern, Holreghan, Okegus. Eugène Giraudet, in Les artistes tourangeaux (Tours, 1885), reproduces a presumed autograph signature on p. 312, but fails to indicate the source, which is otherwise unknown and is now apparently lost. Nevertheless, modern scholarship has generally accepted the authenticity of the signature, in part due to the unusual formation of the e, which could be taken for an e; such an oddity, as Jaap van Benthem has written, “might plead against any suggestion of a nineteenth-century attempt [at] forgery.” The signature, assuming it is indeed genuine, establishes that, at least on this one occasion, the composer spelled his last name OCKEGHEM.

Blue Heron’s existence as a performing ensemble is made possible by the devotion, hard work, and financial support of a community of board members, staff, volunteers, donors, and concertgoers. We offer our grateful thanks to all those who join us in creating, nurturing, and sustaining an organization dedicated to making the music of the 15th and 16th centuries come alive in the 21st.

Blue Heron is extraordinarily fortunate to work with a regular slate of talented, skilled, and devoted designers, engineers, videographers, and photographers. Our programs, postcards, season brochures, advertisements, and CD booklets are designed by Melanie Germond and Pete Goldstuck. Erik Bertrand maintains and rebuilt our website. (The site was originally built by Evan Ingersoll, who also designed our programs for many years.)

We are honored and grateful to have so many generous donors.

Our concerts are brilliantly recorded by Philip Davis (Cape Ann Recordings) or Joel Gordon; Joel is also the engineer for our CDs, working with our producer Eric Milnes. Kathy Wittman (Ball Square Films) is our videographer and Liz Linder is our photographer. Our debt to these wonderful people who have shaped our look and sound is impossible to overstate.

Special thanks to Brett Kostrzewski for help in the preparation of an edition of the Missa Caput from the original sources.

We are very grateful to the gracious hosts who offer their hospitality to musicians from out of town.

Many thanks to our board and to all our volunteers for their help this evening and throughout the year.
