Fors seulement: from sacred to secular in the fifteenth century

A number of themes run through our program this evening. All the sacred music in the concert honors the Blessed Virgin Mary in some fashion. You will hear polyphonic settings of a hymn (Maria mater gratie) and an antiphon (Salve regina) addressed directly to Mary, and Mass movements whose musical material is derived in some way from secular songs which may be interpreted allegorically as expressing devotion to her in one case, or her grief at losing her son in the other.

This is also a story of three generations of musicians from a small geographic area encompassing parts of northern France and the southern Low Countries (now Belgium)—an area, rich in choir schools or maîtrises, that trained most of Europe’s best singers and composers in the fifteenth century. The oldest of our composers, Gilles de Bins, called Binchois, was born around 1400, probably in Mons, the capital of the province of Hainaut. He spent most of his career in the employ of the duke of Burgundy before retiring to Soignies, a town just ten miles northeast of Mons, on the way to Brussels. Johannes Ockeghem was born around 1420 in the small town of St-Ghislain, just to the west of Mons. He worked at the church of Our Lady in Antwerp and in the chapel of the duke of Bourbon before joining the French royal court by 1451. By 1459 he was living in Tours, on the Loire about a hundred miles southwest of Paris, and earning an income as treasurer of the collegiate church of St-Martin, whose nominal head was the king of France. (A collegiate church is one by a college or community of clerics.) Ockeghem died on February 6, 1497, a prosperous and celebrated man whose passing inspired laments by poets and musicians including Josquin, whose setting of Nymphes des bois mourned the older musician’s death, just as Ockeghem had honored Binchois with his Mort, tu as navré de ton dart.

Matthaeus Pipelare, Alexander Agricola, Pierre de la Rue, and Johannes Ghiselin represent the next generation. All four were born in the 1450s, and all also had some connection with the Habsburg-Burgundian court, the descendant of the storied duchy of Burgundy. Agricola was born in Ghent and spent the first decades of his career in Italy and working for the French royal court before joining the Habsburg-Burgundian court in 1500.
La Rue was almost certainly born in the cathedral city of Tournai, also in Hainaut very near the French border, and educated in the cathedral school. He was at the Habsburg–Burgundian court by 1492; he retired in 1516 and died in 1518. Ghiselin, also known as Ver bonnet, is only documented working in Italy between 1491 and 1507, but he was described as “da Piccardia” (from Picardy in northern France) in a Florentine chapel register from 1493 and as a “fiamengo” (Fleming) in one from Ferrara in 1502. His music includes a song whose incipit, “Je l’ay empris,” was the motto of Charles the Bold (d. 1477), the last Burgundian duke to rule an independent polity. Pipelare worked in Antwerp and ’s-Hertogenbosch, and possibly also in Ghent. More than half of his surviving compositions are transmitted in manuscripts associated with the scriptorium of the Habsburg-Burgundian court.

Finally, our program presents compositions based on pre-existent music: songs, motets, and Masses that draw their musical inspiration from one or another of the two most famous songs of the mid-fifteenth century, Ockeghem’s Fors seulement l’actente and Binchois’s Je ne vis onques la pareille.

Fors seulement

Our point of departure is Fors seulement l’actente. The first line of the text is itself borrowed from the end of Alain Chartier’s La Complainte (from the mid-1420s), where it is spoken by the male narrator about his lady and mistress (“ma dame et ma maistresse”), a paragon of virtue snatched away by an untimely death.

Autre bien n’ay, n’autre bien n’assavure Fors seulement l’actente que je meure; Et desire que brefement vieigne l’eure, Qu’apres ma mort en paradis la voye.

No other good do I have, no other good do I enjoy only the expectation that I shall die; and I desire that the hour come shortly, that after my death I shall see her in Paradise.

The text of Ockeghem’s song is spoken by a woman who, rejected by the man she loves, curses her own loyalty to him, which causes her suffering beyond measure. Ockeghem matches the poem’s grief and bitterness with music of stark beauty. A pair of duets open the song, each featuring a falling melodic motive with the distinctive rhythmic profile of a dotted whole note followed by two descending quarter notes (a dotted semibreve and two semiminims, in 15th-century terms). The falling motive occurs more than a dozen times in the course of the song. A duet between the lower voices also introduces the song’s second part, which sounds briefly, deceptively happy, before it returns to a desolate minor mode.

About three dozen subsequent pieces rework the material of Fors seulement. Ockeghem himself took the top part of the song, transposed it down a twelfth, and used it as the lowest, contratenor part of a new song, Fors seulement contre ce qu’ay promis, whose upper two voices declaim a curious political text. Aside from the first two words, is hard to see the connection between this poem and the sentiments of the original rondeau, whose entire first strophe is written in the new song’s contratenor part in one source. An ironic twist seems possible, in which a male speaker’s bluster about alliances and honor is—literally—undercut by a female voice lamenting her abandonment. (A subtle disparity between the mode of the top voices and that of the contratenor leads to some disorienting metrical displacement in the second half the song, too.)

This setting of Fors seulement by Pipelare (one of two he wrote) also takes Ockeghem’s melody and transposes it downwards, surrounding it with three newly-composed parts, one higher and two lower. The piece may have been intended for instruments, for it is transmitted entirely without text and cannot sensibly be divided into two sections, which is necessary for the full performance of a rondeau, but the lines are perfectly singable and carry the poem with ease.

The five-voice Maria mater gratie is transmitted uniquely and anonymously in a songbook that was copied for Marguerite of Austria, the daughter of the Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I, in the scriptorium of Petrus Alamire at Marguerite’s court in the Netherlands, probably sometime after 1516. Marguerite was a highly cultured, politically savvy, and famously melancholy lady who took as her motto “Fortune infortune fort une” (Fortune makes a woman very unhappy), and the contents of her songbook reflect her seriousness and grief. In this song, probably by one of the Habsburg-Burgundian court’s star composers, Pierre de la Rue, four voices pray to Mary for her intercession at the hour of death, while a fifth (second from the bottom) quotes the second voice of Ockeghem’s song down an octave. Nothing but the first two words of the original French text is written in the
This evening we will hear one of his partial Masses, a pioneer both in the development of the Ordinary of the Mass and in the use of borrowed material. Ockeghem composed thirteen extant secular songs and a seventh may well be based on a song that has been lost. Today as Ockeghem's Missa Stabat mater, the city of Constantinople, ancient capital of Eastern Christianity, fell to the Turks in 1453, sending shock waves through Europe. On February 17 of the following year, Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, Philip the Good, swore the Knights of the Order of the Golden Fleece to a new crusade against the Turks.

A pioneer both in the development of the cyclical Mass (a unified setting of the five movements of the Ordinary of the Mass) and in the use of borrowed material, Ockeghem composed thirteen extant cycles (three of which survive in partial form): six are known to draw from pre-existent secular songs and a seventh may well be based on a song that has been lost. This evening we will hear one of his partial cycles—if these three movements do in fact constitute part of a true cycle.

Mass cycles are often regarded as sacrosanct wholes nowadays, but such an attitude was foreign to the fifteenth century, which, however much it valued complete masses, considered it perfectly seemly to extract and sing whatever was needed for the liturgy at hand. Numerous independent mass movements by fifteenth-century composers also testify to the usefulness of single mass sections set polyphonically. In the case of what is generally known today as Ockeghem’s Missa Fors seullement, consisting of three movements (Kyrie, Gloria, and Credo) transmitted together in a single source copied in the Netherlands a few years after the composer’s death, it seems very likely that the Kyrie and Gloria form a pair independent of the Credo, despite all three being set for five voices rather than the usual four, for they differ significantly in style, technique, notated range, and voice designations. The scribe of the manuscript in question, the celebrated Chigi Codex, appears to have expected to copy a complete cycle, for he ruled enough paper to accommodate two more movements scored for five voices. But whether a Sanctus or Agnus (one of the Kyrie and Gloria by Ockeghem ever existed or not, this scribe apparently never received them; he later entered four-voice music on the empty pages.

The Mass movements on Fors seullement present a possible case of a Christological application of a song, with Marian implications. The first strophe, in which a woman, overwhelmed by grief, speaks to a man she is “sure of losing,” might be read allegorically as a sort of Stabat mater, the 13th-century hymn that describes Mary weeping at the foot of the cross. (As so often with these songs, subsequent lines or stanzas do not seem to fit the allegory so gracefully, for it would not be appropriate to speak of the Savior’s “rigeur”—hardness, implacability, pitilessness—or of Mary cursing her loyalty to her son.) In this interpretation, a Missa Fors seullement refers to Christ’s Passion and would most appropriately be sung during Holy Week.

The Kyrie and Gloria are extraordinarily complex pieces of music, in which the dense five-part texture is relieved by the occasional passage for three or four voices. Material derived from the song’s superius and tenor (its two highest voices) is distributed among all five voices of the Mass; even the song’s contratenor is quoted in the Kyrie. Ockeghem explores or exploits one particular feature of the song, its use of notes both a whole tone and a semitone above the final (B natural and B flat above the final of A), with rather startling and harmonically disorienting results. These are particularly apparent in the Gloria at the end of its first section, at the words “filius patris,” where the flat predominates until a last-minute natural in the final sonority, and again at the end of the second section, where the contratenor and tenor answer each other in short canonic segments a tone apart, one voice singing flats, the other naturals, the dispute resolved, once again, at the last moment—but, characteristically for Ockeghem, in a contrapuntal context that makes it impossible to be absolutely certain which version wins out.

In contrast, in the Credo the tenor sings the entire melody of the song’s upper voice, plus some of the second voice’s melody from the B section, all virtually unaltered, in a traditional and (for Ockeghem) straightforward cantus firmus setting featuring numerous duos and trios.

Je ne vis onques la pareille

Je ne vis onques is that rarest of musical works for which we have some specific information about how it was once performed in the fifteenth century. The scene is the Banquet of the Oath of the Pheasant, held in Lille in 1454, at which the duke of Burgundy, Philip the Good, swore the Knights of the Order of the Golden Fleece to a new crusade against the Turks.

The city of Constantinople, ancient capital of Eastern Christianity, fell to the Turks in 1453, sending shock waves through Europe. On February 17 of the following year, Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, convoked the Knights of the Golden Fleece to a grand feast in the city of Lille. Philip had founded the order twenty-five years earlier with the idea of organizing a new crusade, an obsession that acquired new urgency in the wake of the Turkish victory on the very frontier of Christendom. The gathering in Lille, known as the Feast of the Pheasant or the Banquet of the Oath, was meant to win sworn commitments from his Knights. Several descriptions of the Feast have come down to us, including an eyewitness account from a participant, the Burgundian chronicler and poet Olivier de la Marche (written, however, at least twenty years later), and another, nearly identical but somewhat more detailed, compiled by Mathieu d’Escouchy.

The hall where the banquet was held was large and beautifully hung with a tapestry depicting the life of Hercules. In this hall were three covered tables, one medium-sized, another large, and another small. On the medium-sized table was a skilfully-made church with transept and windows, in which there were a ringing bell and four singers who sang and played organs when their turn came.... The second table, which was the largest, had on it....a pastry in which there were twenty-eight living persons playing in turn various instruments.... The third table, smaller than the others, had on it a marvelous forest, like a forest of India, in which there were many strange and strangely made beasts that moved by themselves as if alive....

When everyone was seated....a bell rang very loudly in the church in the principal table.... After the bell had stopped ringing, three little children and a tenor sang a very sweet chanson. And when they had finished, in the pastry....a shepherd played a bagpipe in a very novel fashion. Hardly a moment after that there came in through the entrance to the room a horse walking backwards, richly covered with red silk. On it were two trumpeters seated back to back without a saddle. They were dressed in mantles of gray and black silk, with hats and masks; and they led the horse backwards up and down the length of the room, all the while playing a fanfare on their trumpets.

The entertainments continued with music of flutes, lute, organs, trumpets, and fiddles, motets sung from the church, a fire-breathing dragon, a heron set loose in the hall to be hunted and killed by two falcons, and more mystery plays reenacting the battles of Jason. The climax of the evening was reached with the entrance of a huge giant dressed in green-striped silk.

On his head he wore a turban in the manner of the Saracens of Granada, in his left hand he held an enormous, old-fashioned mace, and with his right hand he led an elephant draped with silk. On the elephant there was a castle, in which there was a woman dressed like a nun in white satin. Over this she wore a cloak of black cloth, and her head was bound with a white kerchief in the style of Burgundy or of a nun.

Apparently played by La Marche himself, the woman represented the Holy Church herself, and she addressed a long lament in verse to the company. After the lamentation was spoken, "the giant and the Church departed....and the oaths began to be sworn on all sides." Many of the knights retained enough composure, despite the late hour and the amount of wine they had surely imbibed, to include in their vows precise restrictions about how exactly their participation in any new crusade might be limited by circumstances supposedly beyond their control. In any event, whatever true enthusiasm there may have been for such an undertaking did not extend to actually carrying it out.

Secular and sacred music intermingle seamlessly in the succession of entremets at the Feast of the Pheasant. A chanson is sung from the church as the festivities get underway: "What it was I could not say," writes D’Escouchy, "but it seemed to me a pleasant benedicite for the commencement of the supper." Motets are sung and played... for entertainment, instrumental solos and ensemble pieces sound at the conclusion of religious allegories; music diverts and persuades, allegorical spectacle both impresses by its virtuosity and compels action, or at least the promise of action; meaning layers upon meaning. Presented in a context so laden with symbolism, which is signalled from the outset by the horse riding backwards, and sung by a boy and a white hart—an unmistakable symbol for Christ—the song Je ne vis oncques la pareille acquires a significance beyond that of a perfectly conventional lyric of courtly love addressed to a “gracious lady”: the lady is Our Lady. The lyric lends itself easily to the transfer, for the lady’s identity, slipping between human and divine, is already questioned by the speaker: “Upon seeing you I marvel / And ask, could this be Our Lady?”

It must be said that, as information about performance practice, the chroniclers’ account of a three-part song sung by a boy and a hart—that rarest of cases in the fifteenth century, a fairly detailed description of the performance of a specific piece—is not exactly what one hopes for. Today we lack a boy and are missing the hart, but we do have a low contratenor, sung on this occasion by a man. (The original contratenor perhaps served as hindquarters for the “artiifice du cherf.”) As for the song, it is grave and moving; one hopes the boy and the stag did it justice. Although it is ascribed to Guillaume Du Fay in one source, scholarly opinion favors another manuscript’s ascription to Binchois, Burgundian chanson composer par excellence, who had retired from the court just a year before the Feast of the Pheasant.

Je ne vis oncques la pareille inspired a large family of works that drew upon its text or music. In the latter half of the fifteenth century, courtly love lyrics were frequently put to use as Marian allegory, and the quotation of a secular song such as Je ne vis oncques la pareille in a piece of sacred music such as a mass or mass movement seems to have signalled the appropriateness of the music for a Marian feast. Alexander Agricola based two Credo settings on it, both preserved in sources that suggest use in Marian masses. The Marian allegory is explicit, of course, if the song is quoted in a Marian antiphon such as the Salve regina, as is the case in the setting by Ghiselin. The first verse of Ghiselin’s Salve regina employs the song in the most audible manner possible, quoting the first nine measures of the song’s melody in the highest voice of the antiphon setting, at the same speed as in the song itself. Various passages also quote the plainchant melody of the antiphon.

Never one to content himself with the simplest solution to a musical challenge, Agricola makes the most complicated uses of Je ne vis oncques la pareille in his two Credo settings based upon it. The Credo *Je ne vis oncques I performed this evening is a highly virtuosic work, filled with syncopation and dashing passage work, culminating in a rollicking third section (“Et iterum venturus est”) that flies along at twice the speed of the opening.

I believe in one God, the Father almighty, maker of heaven and earth and of all things visible and invisible. And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only Son of God, eternally begotten of the Father. God from God, Light from Light, true God from true God. Begotten, not made; of one being with the Father, through whom all things are made. For us and for our salvation he came down from Heaven. He was born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, and was made man. He was crucified for our sake under Pontius Pilate, died, and was buried. On the third day he rose again, in accordance with the Scriptures. He ascended into heaven and is seated at the right hand of the Father. He will come again to judge both the living and the dead, and his kingdom shall have no end. And I believe in the Holy Spirit, the Lord, the giver of life, who proceeds from the Father, who with the Father and Son is worshipped and glorified, who has spoken through the prophets. And I believe in one holy, catholic and apostolic church. I confess one baptism for the forgiveness of sins. And I await the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come. Amen.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

Blue Heron has been acclaimed by The Boston Globe as “one of the Boston music community’s indispensables” and hailed by Alex Ross in The New Yorker for its “expressive intensity.” Committed to vivid live performance informed by the study of original source materials and historical performance practices, Blue Heron ranges over a wide repertoire from plainchant to new music, with particular specialities in 15th-century Franco-Flemish and early 16th-century English polyphony. Blue Heron’s first CD, featuring music by Guillaume Du Fay, was released in 2007. In 2010 the ensemble inaugurated a 5-CD series of Music from the Peterhouse Partbooks, including many world premiere recordings of works copied c. 1540 for Canterbury Cathedral; the fifth disc was released in March 2017 and was just selected as a Critic’s Choice of 2017 by Gramophone. Blue Heron’s recordings also include a CD of plainchant and polyphony to accompany Thomas Forrest Kelly’s book Capturing Music: The Story of Notation and the live recording of Christmas in Medieval England. Jessie Ann Owens (UC Davis) and Blue Heron won the 2015 Noah Greenberg Award from the American Musicological Society to support a world premiere recording of Cipriano de Rore’s first book of madrigals (1542), which it will complete over the next two seasons.

Founded in 1999, Blue Heron presents a concert series in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and has appeared at the Boston Early Music Festival; in New York City at Music Before 1800, The Cloisters (Metropolitan Museum of Art), and the 92nd Street Y; at the Library of Congress, the National Gallery of Art, and Dumbarton Oaks in Washington, D.C.; at the Berkeley Early Music Festival; at Yale University; and in San Luis Obispo, Seattle, St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Providence. This season’s highlights include an October tour to England, with performances at Peterhouse and Trinity College in Cambridge and at Lambeth Palace Library, at the London residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Blue Heron has been in residence at the Center for Early Music Studies at Boston University and at Boston College, and has enjoyed collaborations with A Far Cry, Dark Horse Consort, Les Délices, Parthenia, Piffaro, and Ensemble Plus Ultra. In 2015 the ensemble embarked on a multi-season project to perform the complete works of Johannes Ockeghem (c. 1420-1497). Entitled Ockeghem@600, it will wind up around 2021, in time to commemorate the composer’s circa-600th birthday.

Praised for her “light, fleet soprano” and “soaring, diamantine high notes” (Opera News), Grammy- and Juno-nominated soprano Megan Chartrand feels equally at home singing early music, art song, chamber music, and concert repertoire. Notable solo performances include Dalila in Handel’s Samson with the American Classical Orchestra and Mozart’s Requiem with True Concord, both in Alice Tully Hall at Lincoln Center. Exciting upcoming performances include Handel’s Messiah with the Calgary Philharmonic Orchestra and Clerambault’s Médée with the American Classical Orchestra. Megan sings frequently with many of the most prestigious ensembles in North America including The Choir of Trinity Wall Street, The Clarion Music Society, The American Classical Orchestra, True Concord, The Santa Fe Desert Chorale, Yale Choral Artists, Seraphic Fire, and Ensemble Origo. Born and raised in Sherwood Park, Alberta, she now pursues an active performance career based in New York City. She received her MMus from Yale University and her BMus from the University of Alberta.

Music historian and pianist Sean Gallagher (pre-concert speaker and adviser for Blue Heron’s Ockeghem@600 project) joined the faculty of the New England Conservatory in 2013. His research focuses on late medieval and Renaissance music in Italy, France and the Low Countries, with particular emphasis on Johannes Ockeghem and his contemporaries. His book on the 15th-century composer Johannes Regis was published by Brepols in 2010, and he is editor or co-editor of four further volumes, including Secular Renaissance Music: Forms and Functions (Ashgate, 2013) and (with Thomas F. Kelly) The Century of Bach and Mozart: Perspectives on Historiography, Composition, Theory and Performance (Harvard, 2008). He has taught at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Harvard University (where he was awarded the Phi Beta Kappa Prize for excellence in teaching), and Boston University. In 2007 he was Visiting Professor at Villa I Tatti in Florence. He frequently presents pre-concert talks and lecture-recitals on a wide range of topics.
Bass-baritone Paul Guttry has performed throughout the USA and internationally with Sequentia, Chanticleer, the Boston Camerata, and New York’s Ensemble for Early Music. Paul can be heard on all Blue Heron’s recordings, on discs of medieval music by Sequentia, Kurt Well’s Johnny Johnson and French airs de cour with the Boston Camerata, and on Emmanuel Music’s Bach CDs.

Steven Hrycelak, bass, is equally at home as an operatic, concert, or ensemble performer. He is a member of the Grammy-nominated Choir of Trinity Wall Street, both as ensemble singer and soloist. Other ensembles include ekmeles, the New York Virtuoso Singers, Toby Twining Music, Early Music New York, Vox, TENET, Meridionalis, Seraphic Fire, and the vocal jazz quintet West Side S. His performance in the role of Monteverdi’s Seneca with Opera Omnia was hailed by The New York Times as having “a graceful bearing and depth.” He has traveled the US, Canada, and Europe singing in Frank London’s klezmer musical A Night in the Old Marketplace. Mr. Hrycelak received degrees from Indiana University and Yale University, where he sang with the world-renowned Yale Whiffenpoofs. He is also a vocal coach and accompanist.

Hailed for his “voice of seductive beauty” (Miami Herald), baritone David McFerrin has won critical acclaim in a variety of repertoire. His opera credits include Santa Fe Opera, Seattle Opera, Florida Grand Opera, the Rossini Festival in Germany, and numerous appearances in and around Boston. As concert soloist he has sung with the Cleveland Orchestra, Israel Philharmonic, and Boston Pops, and in recital at the Caramoor, Ravinia, and Marlboro Festivals. Recently Mr. McFerrin was an Adams Fellow at the Carmel Bach Festival in California, debuted with Boston Baroque (as Achilla in Handel’s Giulio Cesare) and Apollo’s Fire in Cleveland, and performed with the Handel & Haydn Society in Boston, New York, and California. Ockeghem@600

Ockeghem@600 is Blue Heron’s multi-year project to perform the complete works of Johannes Ockeghem, one of the very greatest composers of the Western tradition, in thirteen programs over the course of seven seasons. Inaugurated in the spring of 2015, Ockeghem@600 will wind up in 2020-21, just in time to commemorate the 600th anniversary of Ockeghem’s birth in circa 1420.

Besides concerts, the undertaking requires and will include a significant component of research into the many questions of fifteenth-century performance practice which remain unsolved puzzles—questions as basic as pitch level, voice types, and scoring. By the end we expect to have a better understanding of such issues. We will also have created a new complete practical edition of the music of Ockeghem, scrupulously based on the original sources and rigorously tested in practice.

Along the way we will also explore music of Ockeghem’s predecessors (Du Fay, Binchois, et al.), contemporaries (Regis, Busnoys, et al.), and followers (Josquin, Obrecht, Agricola, Isaac, et al.), developing and sharing with our audiences a sense of the entire fifteenth-century repertoire. Succeeding our series of recordings of music from the Peterhouse partbooks, the fifth and final volume of which will be released in spring 2017, a new series of five CDs is being planned, including a 2-CD set of all of Ockeghem’s songs.

Joining Blue Heron as adviser for Ockeghem@600 is Professor Sean Gallagher of the New England Conservatory, one of the world’s leading experts on Ockeghem and the music of the fifteenth century.

WHO WAS JOHANNES OCKEGHEM?

Johannes Ockeghem was born in Saint Ghislain, near the city of Mons in the county of Hainaut (now in Belgium) around 1420. He first enters the historical record in 1443 as a vicar-chanteur at the church of Our Lady in Antwerp, a modest appointment appropriate to a young professional singer. By 1446 he had become one of seven singers in the chapel of Charles I, duke of Bourbon, and in 1451 he joined the musical establishment of Charles VII, king of France. He served the French royal court as premier chaplain for the rest of his career, mainly residing in Tours in the Loire Valley, where he held the prestigious and well-remunerated post of treasurer at the royal collegiate church of Saint Martin. A friend and colleague of the greatest musicians of the previous generation, Guillaume Du Fay and Gilles de Bins (usually known by the sobriquet Binchois), he was esteemed by his contemporaries and successors as a master beyond compare, enormously skilled as both singer and composer, as well as virtuous, generous, and kind.

Writing in 1477, the theorist Johannes Tinctoris placed him at the head of an exalted company of modern composers: Caron, and Guillaume Faugues, who...at this present time, not to mention innumerable singers of the most beautiful diction, there flourish, whether by the effect of some celestial influence or by the force of assiduous practice, countless composers, among them Johannes Ockeghem, Johannes Regis, Antoine Busnoys, Firminus

Ockeghem died on February 6, 1497. His passing was mourned by numerous musicians and poets. The most famous lament on his death is Nymphus des bois, by the Burgundian court chronicler and poet Jean Molinet, later set to music by Josquin Desprez—an act of homage that Ockeghem had previously rendered Binchois with Mort, tu as navré de ton dart.

Ockeghem left us about two dozen French songs, just over a dozen Masses, and four motets, a relatively small output for one of the greatest composers of all time. Perhaps no composer other than Bach has equalled Ockeghem in contrapuntal skill, and the two men are also equally astonishingly able to invest their work with meaning at every level, from the smallest surface detail to the deepest, largest-scale, awe-inspiring complex structure, in music that is at once intensely sensuous and rigorously intellectual, of extraordinary beauty and rhythmic vitality. Ockeghem’s music has the miraculous effect of taking hold of and altering our sense of time, and to do so Ockeghem uses means both melodic and rhythmic (pitch and duration, the basic elements of music). His counterpoint spins out long-limbed, supple, and simply gorgeous melodies whose relationship to one another is not obvious—there are few unanimous cadences and few immediately noticeable points of imitation, although many subtle instances occur, often almost hidden within the texture of the music.

Who was Johannes Ockeghem?

Ockeghem’s surviving music comprises two dozen songs, four motets, nine complete cyclic Masses, three partial Mass cycles, an independent Credo, and an incomplete Requiem.

THE MUSIC OF JOHANNES OCKEGHEM

Ockeghem’s music is at once intensely sensuous and rigorously intellectual, of extraordinary beauty and rhythmic vitality. His rhythm, too, is complex and varied, oftentimes obscuring the music’s organization into regular metrical units of two or three. Captivating at first hearing, Ockeghem’s music rewards the closest possible study and repeated listening.

HOW DID OCKEGHEM SPELL HIS NAME?

Jehan de Ockeghem was born around 1420 in the small town of Saint Ghislain, near Mons, in the county of Hainaut and in the diocese of Cambrai. Saint Ghislain lies in modern-day Belgium, about 50 miles southwest of Brussels and less than ten miles from the present border with France.

Jehan de Ockeghem was born around 1420 in the small town of Saint Ghislain, near Mons, in the county of Hainaut and in the diocese of Cambrai. Saint Ghislain lies in modern-day Belgium, about 50 miles southwest of Brussels and less than ten miles from the present border with France. The county of Hainaut or Hainault was a lordship within the Holy Roman Empire with its capital at Mons (Bergen in Flemish); the name comes from the river Haine. Hainaut comprises what is now the Belgian province of Hainaut and part of the French département of Nord, and included the cities of Charleroi, to the east of Mons, and, to the southwest, Valenciennes and the diocesan seat of Cambrai, both in latter-day France. In 1420 the county was ruled by Jacqueline, daughter of duke Wilhelm II of Bavaria-Straubing, but in 1432 it was ceded to the Duchy of Burgundy under Philip the Good; in 1477, upon the death of Charles the Bold, it passed to the Habsburgs with the rest of the Burgundian Netherlands.

The composer’s given name was Jehan (or Jean), normally given as Johannes in Latin or other non-French contexts. The surname suggests that his family originated in the town of Okegem on the Dendre, less than 35 miles to the north in East Flanders. But during the later Middle Ages, Hainaut was culturally and linguistically French, and Jehan very likely grew up speaking French as his first tongue. By the mid-1440s he was living and working in France, and from about 1450 until his death in 1497 he was a member of the chapel of the the king of France and lived in Tours, in the Loire Valley.

The Flemish family name was a source of endless confusion to speakers of French, Italian, German, and other languages, and it may be found spelled in a bewildering variety of ways in contemporary sources: Ockeghem, Okeghem, Okeheem, Ockheheem, Okegen, Ockenhem, Ockenheim, Okekan, Ockohan, Ockhegen, Hocquegan, Hoquergan, Hoquergan, Hoireghan, Okeghem, Okeghen, Okeghan, Okeghan, Ockeghem, Ockegeem, Ockegheem, Okeghen, Okeghan, Ockeghan, Ockegus, Eugène Giraudet, in Les artistes tourangeaux (Tours, 1885), reproduces a presumed autograph signature on p. 312, but fails to indicate the source, which is otherwise unknown and is now apparently lost. Nevertheless, modern scholarship has generally accepted the authenticity of the signature, in part due to the unusual formation of the c, which could be taken for an e; such an oddity, as Jaap van Benthem has written, “might plead against any suggestion of a nineteenth-century attempt [at] forgery.” The signature, assuming it is indeed genuine, establishes that, at least on this one occasion, the composer spelled his last name OCKEGHEM.

Many thanks to all those who join us in creating, nurturing, and sustaining an organization dedicated to making the music of the 15th and 16th centuries come alive in the 21st.

Blue Heron is extraordinarily fortunate to work with a slate of talented, skilled, and devoted designers, engineers, videographers, and photographers. Our programs, printed publicity materials, and CDs are designed by Melanie Germond and Pete Goldlust. FlashPrint in Harvard Square has printed our programs for as long as we can remember. Erik Bertrand built and maintains our website. Our concerts are recorded by Philip Davis (Cape Ann Recordings) or Joel Gordon. Joel is also the engineer for our CDs, working with our producer Eric Milnes. Kathy Wittman (Ball Square Films) is our videographer and Liz Linder is our photographer. Our debt to these wonderful people who have shaped our look and sound is impossible to overstate.

We are very grateful to the gracious hosts who offer their hospitality to musicians from out of town. Many thanks to our board and to all our volunteers for their help this evening and throughout the year.

We are honored and grateful to have so many generous donors.
